NECROMANCY.

WIZARD of the wilding ways,
Ruler of the changing days,
Round and round the world
and under.
Skies of molten, woods of wonder.
Stately mountain, moody sea,
Matter fixed and forces free,
Form and color, use, intent,
Yield unto thy blandishment.
Wizard of the wilding ways,
Beauty ever speaks thy praise
Flowering meads and fruitful fields
Light and shade that seed time yields,
Streams that bear the harvest down,
Hills that templed cities crown,
Ever living, ever dying,
To thy will are still complying.
Wizard of the wilding ways,
Man, thy power doth amaze,
Little does he understand
Of the cunning of thy hand
That doth mark the leaf with veins
And control the plangent rains,
But he treasures up thy deeds,
And they utility his creeds.
—Charles W. Stevenson.

W. F. RAMSEY has resigned from the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas to fly into the face of that Democratic precedent in Texas which entitles Governor Colquitt to a second term. Judge Ramsey is slated to retire again after the July primaries. His next retirement will be from politics.

THE country is deeply interested in the cause of the horrible explosion in San Antonio last week. If it was the result of knavery, as the results so far disclosed of the investigation seem to discredit, no stone should be left unturned to ferret out and punish the perpetrators.

If on the other hand, it was the result of careless or incompetent workmen, as the investigation would now seem to indicate, it is time the public demanded of the railroad that it place competent men in charge of its affairs to the end that the lives of its employees as well as of the general public be not needlessly exposed to danger.

THE strike of textile workers at Lawrence, Mass., has been settled by the mill owners granting the workers the increase in wages demanded. The same press despatches that bring this news bring the further information that this additional cost to textile manufacturers, amounting for the coming year to about $12,000,000, will be passed on to the ultimate consumer through advances in the price of woolen and cotton goods. In other words, the wearers of clothing must pay more for their clothing than the mill workers may enjoy, a larger wage. When every body else's wages are increased in proportion, these mill workers' wages will buy them no more than their present wage affords them and then we presume it will be in order to strike for another raise. So it goes in every line of productive endeavor, and where the struggle for more, more will end is a mystery to the most far seeing economists. It is natural to sympathize with the over-worked and underpaid textile worker, and the sympathy is well placed. But at the same time the ill-clad wearers of textile garments are not to be ignored. And between the two the mill-owner must not be blamed for, as every one knows, there is a legitimate profit that every business must make or suspend operations. A suspension of textile manufactures would mean neither wage for the worker or clothes for the wearer. "Watchman, what of the night?"

There is more Cattarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven cattarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Cattarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars testimonials.

Base Ball at Mico.

The Regulars and Yannigans of the M. I. Co. played another fast game at Mico Sunday, the score was 3 to 2 in favor of the Regulars. Both pitchers were in splendid form. Curran for the Regulars got 10 strike-outs, while Saunders of the Yannigans struck out 7. Curran's three hits hit in the third inning with two on bases won the game for the Regulars, while Taylor of the Yannigans got the only hit off of Curran.

In the near future the Mico team will challenge the surrounding teams.

Stubborn Case

"I was under the treatment of two doctors," writes Mrs. R. L. Phillips, of Indian Valley, Va., "and they pronounced my case a very stubborn one, of womanly weakness. I was not able to sit up, when I commenced to take Cardui."

I used it about one week, before I saw much change. Now, the severe pain, that had been in my side for years, has gone, and I don't suffer at all. I am feeling better than in a long time, and cannot speak too highly of Cardui."

We mentioned in our last week's letter that Frank P. Seekatz of Rionne-dina had missed a horse and saddle last Monday morning. This was a mistake, the same belonged to Ed. Seekatz. A few days later that gentleman was notified that his horse was taken up near MacDona. It is supposed some fellow had ridden the animal to that station then turned the same loose and boarded the train.

August Kempf of Hondo, our popular District Clerk, was a business visitor.

This Section was again visited by a fine rain Thursday night. The Medina came down on a two foot rise Saturday morning. We learn that Bandera Creek was contributory to said rise.

Rev. Walter Kralik left Friday on a business trip to Marion.

Mesdames Ed. Rieber and C. Weimer of San Antonio, arrived Friday evening on a visit to their sister-in-law, Mrs. Monier, who we are sorry to say is ill.

Quite an excitement was created Saturday afternoon by a couple of fellows who were feeling good and driving at break neck speed along the streets in a buggy. Finally one of the wheels broke down and one of the occupants tumbled out. Then our peace officers took a hand in the matter.

Constable L. W. Burell brought in a prisoner Sunday and lodged him in jail. We learn that he is charged with theft of a horse.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kaufmann of Haby Settlement were called to the bed side of their brother-in-law, a Mr. Buerkle of San Antonio. He was a watchman for the S. P. R. R. and was injured during last Monday's explosion.

Co. Judge H. E. Haass, Co. Attorney R. J. Noonan, Co. Clerk S. A. Jungmann, and Sheriff J. F. Bader of Hondo all came over Monday on business bound.

Died.

Mr. John B. Karm Sr. died at his home several miles above town on Tuesday morning, March 19, 1912, and was laid to rest on his farm Wednesday morning. The deceased was born during the year 1846, consequently was in his sixty-sixth year at the time of his demise. When two years of age he came to this country with his parents from Alsace, Germany. His parents came direct to Castroville. In 1870 he joined Company E, Texas Rangers, under Capt. H. J. Richartz and served in this capacity on the frontier. During the year 1872 he was happily married to Miss Mary Brown, which union was blessed with five children, four sons and one daughter, of whom only two survive: John B., Jr., and Mrs. Henry App. Besides his grief-stricken wife and fatherless children, he leaves one grand-son, two brothers, George and Jacob Karm, one sister, Mrs. Henry Zinsmeister, and a number of other near and dear relatives to mourn his death. A good-sized cortège of mourning relatives and friends followed the corpse to its last resting place. We join in sympathy with the bereaved ones.

He Prayed for Rain.

Last Sunday a colored preacher, who is noted for his rugged eloquence, was requested to pray for rain. Being of an accommodating disposition, he readily consented and offered up a petition that was fervid, variegated and unique. He said in part:

"Thou knowest, oh Lord, that we is havin' de wost drought heah that you ever saw. De craps is all dryin' up, de wash millions is whited on de vine, de sweet 'taters is about all killed, de streams is about stopped runnin' an' famine is about to bust forth in all its fury. De whole lan' is as dry as an ornery, uncovered niggah in a prohibition town an' somethin' raly mus' be done or thy servants will all perish.

"Now, what we need is a good, soakin' rain, an' we implore yhee to hear our prayers an' turn de flood gates of heaven loose. De time has gone by when de gentle dew will do any good. We don't want no gentle showers with rainbows an' twitterin' birds, nor any sizzly-sizzly sprinkles, but we wants a regular rip-snortin' roarin' screamin' sodsoakin', gullywashin' gravelin' heavin', trashmovin' root-searchin' down pourin' rain.

"Den, oh Lord, let de thunder beller, let the lightnin' flash, let de clouds burst an' send us a rain that will soak the groun' clean down to de bowels of the airt an' cause springs to burst forth in all the valleys an' make de desert bloom as de rose."—Carthage Democrat.

HOW WEAK WOMEN

May Be Made Strong at Small Expense and No Risk

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity, weak, thin, run-down, tired out and nervous. Such women need Vinol just as much as did Mrs. Jane Pepper, of 2307 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal., who says:

"I have used Vinol for some time with particularly gratifying results. I was run down, weak and debilitated, and my appetite was gone. After taking several bottles of Vinol I found my condition greatly improved, and do not hesitate to recommend Vinol to anyone similarly affected."

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, but a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

NECROMANCY.

WIZARD of the wilding ways,
Ruler of the changing days,
Round and round the world
and under,
Skele of motley, woods of wonder,
Stately mountain, moody sea,
Matter fixed and forces free,
Form and color, use, intent,
Yield unto thy blandishment.

Wizard of the wilding ways,
Beauty ever speaks thy praise
Flower meads and fruitful fields
Light and shade that seed time yields,
Streams that bear the harvest down,
Hills that templed cities crown,
Ever living, ever dying,
To thy will are still complying.

Wizard of the wilding ways,
Man, thy power doth amaze,
Little does he understand
Of the cunning of thy hand
That doth mark the leaf with veins
And control the plangent rains,
But he treasures up thy deeds,
And they unify thy creeds.

—Charles W. Stevenson.

W. F. RAMSEY has resigned from the office of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas to fly into the face of that Democratic precedent in Texas which entitles Governor Colquitt to a second term. Judge Ramsey is slated to retire again after the July primaries. His next retirement will be from politics.

THE country is deeply interested in the cause of the horrible explosion in San Antonio last week. If it was the result of knavery, as the results so far disclosed of the investigation seem to discredit, no stone should be left unturned to ferret out and punish the perpetrators. If on the other hand, it was the result of careless or incompetent workmen, as the investigation would now seem to indicate, it is time the public demanded of the railroad that it place competent men in charge of its affairs to the end that the lives of its employees as well as of the general public be not needlessly exposed to danger.

THE strike of textile workers at Lawrence, Mass., has been settled by the mill owners granting the workers the increase in wages demanded. The same press despatches that bring this news bring the further information that this additional cost to textile manufacturers, amounting for the coming year to about $12,000,000, will be passed on to the ultimate consumer through ad-

There is more Cattarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable.

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable.

Science has proven cattarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars testimonials.

Stubborn Case

"I was under the treatment of two doctors," writes Mrs. R. L. Phillips, of Indian Valley, Va., "and they pronounced my case a very stubborn one, of womanly weakness. I was not able to sit up, when I commenced to take Cardui."

I used it about one week, before I saw much change. Now, the severe pain, that had been in my side for years, has gone, and I don't suffer at all. I am feeling better than in a long time, and cannot speak too highly of Cardui."

Died.

Mr. John B. Karm Sr. died at his home several miles above town on Tuesday morning, March 19, 1912, and was laid to rest on his farm Wednesday morning. The deceased was born during the year 1846, consequently was in his sixty-sixth year at the time of his demise. When two years of age he came to this country with his parents from Alsace, Germany. His parents came direct to Castroville. In 1870 he joined Company E, Texas Rangers, under Capt. H. J. Richartz and served in this capacity on the frontier. During the year 1872 he was happily married to Miss Mary Brown, which union was blessed with five children, four sons and one daughter, of whom only two survive: John B., Jr., and Mrs. Henry App. Besides his grief-stricken wife and fatherless children, he leaves one grandson, two brothers, George and Jacob Karm, one sister, Mrs. Henry Zinsmeister, and a number of other near and dear relatives to mourn his death. A good-sized cortage of mourning relatives and friends followed the corpse to its last resting place. We join in sympathy with the bereaved ones.

Ah, then how sweetly closed those crowded days,
The minutes parting one by one
Like rays
That fade upon a summer's eve.
But, oh, what charm or magic numbers
Can give me back the gentle slumbers
Those weary, happy days did leave?
When by my bed I saw my mother kneel
And with her blessing took her nightly kiss;
Whatever Time destroys he cannot this—
Even now that nameless kiss I feel

READ the Anvil Herald's advertisements and patronize those whose advertisements you find in its columns. They have bought the space because they want to call your attention to their wares and invite your trade. By patronizing them and telling them where you saw their advertisement you will convince them that their investment paid and they will realize the value of our columns as an advertising medium.

THE Anvil Herald has no patience with that kind of tariff reform that begins with taking the tariff off of one thing while leaving it on another. For instance, hides were placed on the free-list while boots, shoes and other leather goods remained taxed and the result is that they cost as much as ever to the consumer and whatever benefit comes from free hides is swallowed up by the importer who buys his hides in the raw state abroad, imports them free, works them up into leather goods and sells them to the ultimate consumer in a protected market. It is right and proper to place articles that are controlled by a trust on the free-list but aside from that tariff taxes should be distributed over as wide a range of articles as possible to the end that as many as possible may share in its benefits and its burdens may be distributed as widely as possible.

Pauline Hornung, Hondo	940
Hulda Muennink, N. Fountain	870
Frieda Poerner, Devine	860
Marie Filleman	850
Meta Bippert	810

This is our last count until the close of the contest and the final count April 17th. The votes already counted are each assorted, sealed in separate envelopes and locked securely in a separate box where these figures may be verified in the final count. From now until the close of the contest, ballots will all be cast in another box and these will be counted by a committee of five on April 17th. Each of the three leading contestants may name one of their friends as a member of this committee. These three may select the fourth man and the editor of this paper will constitute the fifth. Obviously with this we must discontinue the giving of an EXTRA SPECIAL bonus of five thousand votes for the largest club sent in each week, but each club of five sent in at any time between now and the close will entitle the young lady receiving them to the REGULAR FIVE THOUSAND BONUS. Subscriptions may be sent in in any number and when a young lady has five to her credit, she will be given the extra votes. This is the last call. Send in your subscriptions, and remember a new five year subscription counts for the most—6000 votes. At the same time, don't forget that you can get votes for cash purchases at Schmitt & Steinhardt's, W. H. Windrow's, C. R. Gaines', F. A. Heyen's, W. E. Clark's, The Leader and Mrs. Hattie Canon's. Don't forget to call for them when you make your purchases. No one can tell who is going to win the piano until the final count. Get busy and get all of the votes you can.

Was born in Bandera Co., Texas, Feb. 23rd, 1889, and departed this life March 20, 1912, aged 23 years and 26 days.

On the 21st in the afternoon, his remains were laid beside his mother in the new cemetery near Hondo, Texas. Notwithstanding the weather was cold and drizzly, the funeral was well attended by both men and women. Rev. J. T. Horger, local minister of M. E. Church, and Rev. F. G. Moses, pastor of the Baptist Church officiated.

Brother Causey was a young man of good morals, industrious habits, especially noted for his reverence, love and care for his parents, and his faithful and untiring care for his mother in her protracted illness, who preceeded him to the eternal world only a few weeks. He leaves a father, brother and sister, together with a host of friends to mourn his departure, for only a short time when we too shall pass over, we trust, to enjoy the association of our loved ones for ever and ever. May God bless the bereaved ones.

REV. J. T. HORGER.

New Fountain Notes.

BY NARRATOR.

ED. ANVIL HERALD:-

Mr. Alvin Mumme and Miss Isabelle Brucks were happily married in the New Fountain Methodist church at three o'clock last Thursday afternoon, Rev. M. L. Darby, pastor of the Hondo Methodist church, performed the nuptial ceremony. Mr. Robert Mumme and Miss Nellie Brucks were bridal attendants. After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the hospitable home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Brucks, at Verdina, where a sumptuous wedding supper was partaken.

The bride is one of the pretty and accomplished twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Brucks. The groom, a handsome and much respected young man, is a son of Mrs. Katie Mumme.

The young people are very popular and treated their friends that night with a free wedding ball in the Saathoff Bros. Hall. But owing to the bad weather that night the attendance was not near as large as would have been had the weather been more favorable.

The happy young couple have a large circle of friends, amongst them Narrator, who joins in the general compliments and in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous married life.

Rev. J. F. Koch, pastor of the New Fountain Methodist church, left the forepart of last week for Houston where he is on business bound.

Fritz Helemke returned Friday from few days stay in the Alamo City.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bohlen of this place and Miss Annie Nienhoffer of Quihi were shopping in Castroville one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Thum of New Braunfels were here on business the latter part of last week and were the guests of relatives and friends in this vicinity.

John Muennink drove a bunch of fed steers over to Hondo Monday and was about to ship to the San Antonio market when Claud Gilliam, the damsite butcher, bought them and had them returned to Mico, where they will be slaughtered. The steers were judged to average 1120 pounds and the price paid was $5.50 a hundred.

Mrs. Jane Deckenbach of Portland, Oregon, is here visiting her old acquaintances and is the guest of Joe Britsch and family. Mrs. Deckenbach (nee Meyer) in her girlhood days was a resident of this vicinity and has many acquaintances here.

F. J. Saathoff went down to San Antonio Sunday to meet his mother-in-law, Mrs. Winkler, who had been staying with a daughter in New Braunfels. They returned Monday and the venerable old lady will make this her home for some time.

There will be a grand entertainment at Vandenberg in the Saathoff Bros. hall Saturday night, under the management of Miss Annie Hunnam, teacher of the Vandenberg school. Miss Hunnam has been the teacher of that school for the past several years, and with the recollection of former entertainments given by Miss Hunnam, it is safe to say that this one too will be a highly instructive and laudable one.

John Loesberg, aged 71 years, one month and eleven days old, died of dropsy last Friday afternoon at his home at Quihi, after a lingering illness of several months duration. The remains were interred (the following afternoon) in the family grave yard by the side of those of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Breiten, who by several years preceded him in death. Rev. A. Falkenberg officiated. When a boy six years of age he with his parents came to this country from the old fatherland, and was among the first settlers at Quihi. Surviving is his widow and eight children, four daughters and four sons. May he rest in peace.

The New Fountain High School closes Friday after a six month term of school.

With its briefness of school the patrons are dissatisfied and that they may extend their term of school, the property tax payers of this school-district, No. 30, will vote at a special school tax election Saturday, March 30, 1912, to levy a special school tax. It is hoped that the election will carry.

The Chalice of Courage

Being the Story of Certain Persons Who Dared It and Conquered

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Edith Maitland, a frank, bold and unapologetic young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II.—His persistent wooing impresses the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

CHAPTER III.—Edith hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help.

CHAPTER IV.—Kirby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Edith a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them.

CHAPTER V.—While Edith is bathing in the river in fancied solitude, a big bear appears on the bank and is about to plunge into the water to attack the girl when a shot rings out and the animal is killed by a strange man.

CHAPTER VI.—Edith is caught in a storm which wrecks her party's camp, and is dashed upon the rocks and injured. The strange man who shot the bear finds her unconscious and carries her to shelter.

CHAPTER VII.—Members of the camping party realizing that Edith is lost in the storm institute a frantic search for the missing girl.

CHAPTER VIII.—No trace of her is found and word is telegraphed to her brother, James Armstrong, asking the brother for Edith's hand when the telegram expresses the belief that the girl is dead. Armstrong says he will find Edith and Maitland agrees to their marriage if he succeeds.

CHAPTER IX.

"Over the Hills and Far Away." Recognition—or some other more potent instantaneous force—brought the woman to a sitting position. The man drew back to give her freedom of action, as she lifted herself on her hands. It was moments before complete consciousness of her situation came to her. The surprise was yet too great, she saw things dimly through a whirl of driving rain, of a whirling mighty wind, of a seething sea of water, but presently it was all plain to her again. She had caught the far view of the man who had shot the bear as he splashed through the creek and tramped across the rocks and trees down the canon, at least now had not seen him full face, but she recognized him immediately. The thought tinged with color for a moment her pallid cheek.

"I fell into the torrent," she said feebly, putting her hand to her head and straining by speech to put aside that awful remembrance.

"You didn't fall in," was the answer, "it was a cloudburst, you were caught in it."

"I didn't know."

"Of course not, how should you?"

"And how came I here?"

"I was lucky enough to pull you out."

"Did you jump into the flood for me?"

The man nodded.

"That's twice you have saved my life this day," said the girl, forcing herself, womanlike, to the topic that she hated.

"It's nothing," deprecates the other.

"It may be nothing to you, but it is a great deal to me," was the answer. "Now what is to be done?"

"We must get out of her at once," said the man. "You need shelter, food, a fire. Can you walk?"

"I don't know."

"Let me help you." He rose to his feet, reached down to her, took her hands in the strong grasp of his own and raised her lightly to her feet in an effortless way which showed his great strength. She did not more than put the weight of her body slightly on her left foot when a sharp pain shot through her, she swerved and would have fallen had he not caught her. He sat her gently on the bank.

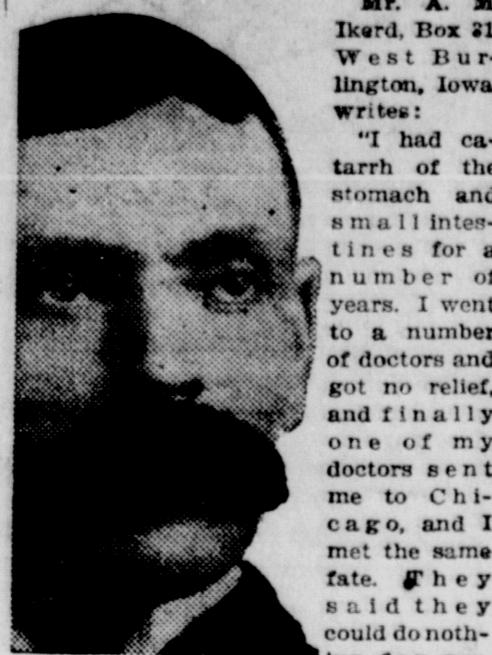

"My foot," she said pitifully. "I don't know what's the matter with it."

Her high boots were tightly laced, of course, but he could see that her left foot had been badly maimed or sprained; already the slender ankle was swelling visibly. He examined it briefly a moment. It might be a sprain, it might be the result of some violent thrust against the rocks, some whirling tree trunks might have caught and crushed her foot, but there was no good in speculating as to causes, the present patent fact was that she could not walk; all the rest was not that moment unimportant. This unfortunate accident made him more anxious to get her to a place of shelter without delay. It would be necessary to take off her boot and give the wounded member proper treatment. For the present the tight shoe acted as a bandage, which was well.

When the man had withdrawn himself from the world, he had inwardly resolved that no human being should ever invade his domain or share his solitude, and during his long sojourn

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

Could Hardly Eat. Gradually Grew Worse. Relieved by Peruna.

Mr. A. M. Ikord, Box 21, West Burlington, Iowa, writes:

"I had catarrh of the stomach and small intestines for a number of years. I went to a number of doctors and got no relief, and finally one of my doctors sent me to Chicago, and I met the same fate. They said they could do nothing for me; said I had cancer of the stomach and there was no cure. I almost thought the same, for my breath was offensive and I could not eat anything without great misery, and I gradually grew worse."

"Finally I concluded to try Peruna, and I found relief and a cure for that dreadful disease, catarrh. I took five bottles of Peruna and two of Manalin, and I now feel like a new man. There is nothing better than Peruna, and I keep a bottle of it in my house all the time."

in the wilderness his determination had not weakened. Now his coming desire was to get this woman whom fortune—good or ill!—had thrown upon his hands to his house without delay. There was nothing he could do for her out there in the rain. Every drop of whiskey was gone, they were just two half-drowned, sodden bits of humanity cast up on that rocky shore, and one was a helpless man.

"Do you know where your camp is?" he asked at last.

He did not wish to take her to her own camp, he had a strange instinct of possession in her. In some way he felt he had obtained a right to deal with her as he would. He had saved her life twice, once by chance, the other as the result of deliberate and heroic endeavor, and yet his honor and his manhood obliged him to offer to take her to her own people if he could. Hence the question, the answer to which he waited so eagerly.

"It's down the canon. I am one of Mr. Robert Maitland's party."

The man nodded, he didn't know

He did not make any apology for his next action, he just stooped down and, disregarding her faint protests and objections, picked her up in his arms. She was by no means a light burden, and he did not run away with her as the heroes of romances do. But he was a man far beyond the average in strength, and with a stout heart and a resolute courage that had always carried him successfully through whatever he attempted, and he had need of all his qualities, physical and mental, before he finished that awful journey.

The woman struggled a little at first, then finally resigned herself to the situation; indeed, she thought swiftly, there was nothing else to do, she had no choice, she could not have been left alone there in the rocks in that rain, she could not walk. He was doing the only thing possible. The compulsion of the inevitable was upon them both.

They went slowly, the man often stopped for rest, at which times he would seat her tenderly upon some prostrate tree, or some rounded boulder, until he was ready to resume his task. He did not bother her with explanation, discussion or other conversation, for which she was most thankful. Once or twice during the slow progress she tried to walk, but the slightest pressure on her wounded foot nearly caused her to faint. He made no complaint about his burden and she found it, after all, pleasant to be upheld by such powerful arms; she was so sick, so tired, so worn out, and there was such assurance of strength and safety in his firm hold of her.

By and by, in the last stage of their journey, her head dropped on his shoulder and she actually fell into a uneasy troubled sleep. He did not know whether she slumbered or whether she had fainted again. He did not dare to stop to find out, his strength was almost spent; in this last effort the strain upon his muscles was almost as great as it had been in the whirlpool. For the second time that day the sweat stood out on his forehead, his legs trembled under him. How he made the last five hundred feet up the steep wall to a certain broad shelf perhaps an acre in extent where he had built his hut among the mountains, he never knew; but the last remnant of his force was spent when he finally opened the unlatched door with his foot, carried her in the log hut and laid her upon the bed or bunk built against one wall of the cabin.

Yet the way he put her down was characteristic of the man. That last vestige of strength had served him well. He did not drop her as a less thoughtful and less determined man might have done, he laid her there as gently and as tenderly as if she weighed nothing, and as if he had carried her nowhere. So quiet and easy was his handling of her that she did not wake up at once.

So soon as she was out of his arms,

Robert Maitland from Adam, and he cared nothing about him.

"How far down?" he asked.

"I don't know, how far is it from here to where you—where—where we—"

"About a mile," he replied, quickly fully understanding her reason for faltering.

"Then I think I must have come at least five miles from the camp this morning."

"It will be four miles away, then," said the man.

The girl nodded.

"I couldn't carry you that far," he murmured half to himself; "I question if there is any camp left there anyway. Where was it, down by the water's edge?"

"Yes."

"Every vestige will have been swept away by that, look at it," he pointed over to the lake.

"What must we do?" she asked instantly, depending upon his greater strength, his larger experience, his masculine force.

"I shall have to take you to my camp."

"Is it far?"

"About a mile or a mile and a half from here."

"I can't walk that far."

"No, suppose not. You wouldn't be willing to stay here while I went down and hunted for your camp?"

The girl clutched at him.

"I couldn't be left here for a moment alone," she said in sudden fever of alarm. "I never was afraid before, but now—"

"All right," he said, gently patting her as he would a child. "We'll go up to my camp and then I will try to find your people and—"

"But I tell you I can't walk."

"You don't have to walk," said the man.

He did not make any apology for his next action, he just stooped down and, disregarding her faint protests and objections, picked her up in his arms. She was by no means a light burden, and he did not run away with her as the heroes of romances do. So quiet and easy was his handling of her that she did not wake up at once.

So soon as she was out of his arms, he stood up and stared at her in great alarm, which soon gave way to reassurance. She had not fainted, there was a little tinge of color in her cheek that had rubbed up against his rough hunting coat; she was asleep, her regular breathing told him that. Sleep was of course the very best of medicines for her, and yet she should not be allowed to sleep until she had got rid of her wet clothing and until something had been done for her wounded foot. It was indeed an embarrassing situation.

He surveyed her for a few moments wondering how best to begin. Then realizing the necessity for immediate action, he bent over her and woke her up. Again she stared at him in bewilderment until he spoke.

"This is my house," he said, "we are home."

"Home!" sobbed the girl.

"Under shelter, then," said the man.

"You are very tired and very sleepy, but there is something to be done; you must take off those wet clothes at once, you must have something to eat, and I must have a look at that foot, and then you can have your sleep out."

The girl stared at him, his program, if a radical one under the circumstances, was nevertheless a rational one, indeed the only one. How was it to be carried out? The man easily divined her thoughts.

"There is another room in this house, a store room. I cook in there," he said. "I am going in there now to get you something to eat; meanwhile you must undress yourself and go to bed."

He went to a rude set of box-like shelves draped with a curtain, apparently his own handiwork, against the wall, and brought from it a long and somewhat shapeless woolen gown.

"You can wear this to sleep in," he continued. "First of all, though, I am going to have a look at that foot."

He bent down to where her wounded foot lay extended on the bed.

"Wait," said the girl, lifting herself on her arm, and as she did so he lifted his head and answered her direct gaze with his own. "I am a woman, absolutely alone, entirely at your mercy; you are stronger than I, I have no choice but to do what you bid me. And in addition to the natural weakness of my sex I am the more helpless from this foot. What do you intend to do with me? How do you mean to treat me?"

It was a bold, a splendid question, and it evoked the answer it merited.

"As God is my judge," said the man quietly, "just as you ought to be treated, as I would want another to treat my mother, or my sister, or my wife"—she noticed how curiously his lips suddenly tightened at that word—"if I had one. I never harmed a woman in my life," he continued more earnestly, "only one, that is," he corrected himself, and once again she marked that peculiar contraction of the lips. "And I could not help that," he added.

"I trust you," said the girl at last, after gazing at him long and hard as if to search out the secrets of his very soul. "You have saved my life and things dearer will be safe with you. I have to trust you."

"I hope," came the quick comment, "that it is not only for that. I don't want to be trusted upon compulsion."

"You must have fought terribly for my life in the flood," was the answer.

"I can remember what it was now, and you carried me over the rocks and the mountains without faltering. Only a man could do what you have done. I trust you anyway."

"Thank you," said the man briefly as he bent over the injured foot again.

The boot laced up the front, the short skirt left all plainly visible. With deft fingers he undid the sudden knot and unlaced it, then stood hesitatingly for a moment.

"I don't like to cut your only pair of shoes," he said as he made a slight motion to draw it off, and then observing the spasm of pain, stopped.

"Needs must," he continued, taking out his knife and slitting the leather.

He did it very carefully so as not to ruin the boot beyond repair, and finally succeeded in getting it off without giving her too much pain. And she was not so tired or so miserable as to be unaware of his gentleness.

His manner, matter of fact, business like, if he had been a doctor one would have called it professional, distinctly pleased her in this trying and unusual position. Her stocking was stained with blood. The man rose to his feet, took from a rude homemade chair a light Mexican blanket and laid it considerably across the girl.

"Now if you can manage to get off your stocking yourself, I will see what can be done," he said, turning away.

It was the work of a few seconds for her to comply with his request.

Hanging the wet stocking carefully over a chair back, he drew back the blanket a little and carefully inspected the poor little foot. He saw at once that it was not

HERBINE

A Medicine of Power in All Liver Disorders.

When the liver is torpid, it throws impurities into the system, which hamper every organ in the body. The result is that functional processes are not properly carried on. Impurities get into the blood, the stomach is bilious, the kidneys weak and the bowels irregular—generally constipated. Herbine clears out all these impurities, opens up the obstructed channels, strengthens the torpid liver, cleanses the blood, purifies and regulates the bowels. After the system has been thus overhauled, there is an immediate improvement. Appetite returns, digestion is good, the spirits rise, the mind clears of gloomy forebodings and everything looks bright and cheerful, which means sound, healthy conditions everywhere in the body.

some steaming broth. She wondered how he had made it in such a hurry, but after he poured it into a granite-ware cup and offered it to her, she took it without question. It was thick, warming and nourishing. He stood by her and insisted that she take more and more. Finally she rebelled.

"Well, perhaps that will do for tonight," he said; "now let's have a look at your foot."

She observed that he had laid on the table a long roll of white cloth; she could not know that he had torn up one of his sheets to make bandages, but so it was. He took the little foot tenderly in his hands.

"I am going to hurt you," he said. "I am going to find out if there is anything more than a bruise, any bones broken."

There was no denying that he did pain her exquisitely.

"I can't help it," he said as she cried aloud, "I have got to see what's the matter. I am almost through now."

"Go on, I can bear it," she said faintly. "I feel so much better, anyway, now that I am dry and warm."

"So far as I can determine," said the man at last, "it is only a bad, ugly bruise; the skin is torn, it has been battered, but it is neither sprained nor broken, and I don't think it is going to be very serious. Now I am going to bathe it in the hottest water you can bear, and then I will bandage it and let you go to sleep."

He went out and came back with a kettle of boiling water, with which he laved again and again the poor, torn, battered little member. Never in her life had anything been so grateful as these repeated applications of hot water. After a while he applied a healing lotion of some kind, then he took his long roll of bandage and wound it dexterously around her foot, not drawing it too close to prevent circulation, but just tight enough for support, then as he finished she drew it back beneath the cover. Sold by W. H. Windrow.

"Now," said he, "there is nothing more I can do for you tonight, is there?"

"Nothing."

"I want you to go to sleep now, you will be perfectly safe here. I am going down the canon to search—"

"No," said the girl apprehensively. "I dare not be left alone here; besides I know how dangerous it would be for you to try to descend the canon in this rain; you have risked enough for me, you must wait until the morning. I shall feel better then."

"But think of the anxiety of your friends."

"I can't help it," was the nervous reply. "I am afraid to be left alone here at night."

Her voice trembled; he was fearful she would have a nervous breakdown.

"Very well," he said soothingly, "I will not leave you till the morning."

"Where will you stay?"

"I'll make a shakedown for myself in the store room," he answered, "I shall be right within call at any time."

It had grown dark outside by this time and the two in the log hut could barely see each other.

"I think I shall light the fire," continued the man, "it will be sort of company for you and it gets cold up here nights at this season. I shouldn't wonder if this rain turned into snow. Besides, it will dry your clothes for you."

Boys Again

After dinner Mannows, who had gone east on a business trip, went out for a walk. Presently he found himself passing the buildings wherein he had had education forcibly instilled in him.

"Forty years old!" he said, a trifle indignantly, at length. "I don't believe it!"

As he still stood and stared some one passing bumped into him. Mannows, catching sight of the face in the glare of the street lamp, whirled him around. "Buh!" he howled. "If it ain't Bill!"

The captured man, after one look, broke into exclamation points.

Two rather portly men dancing on the sidewalk are apt to attract attention, so Mannows and his friend moved on.

"I was just mooning over the time when I was hiking up those steps," explained Mannows. "Greatest old college on earth, that!"

"Not while Harvard is still running," said Bill.

Mannows laughed, remembering "Terrible rows Harvard and Tech used to have, eh? Odd how hot-headed boys will get. Why, I remember calling you every name in the dictionary because you were so chesty over Harvard and sneered at Tech! Tech meant more to me than family, friends or fortune! I felt that you had insulted me personally!"

"So did I," confided Bill, "when you did a highland fling the time Tech licked Harvard at football! I remember meditating how satisfying it would be to stay you. Bloodthirsty little demons, college boys."

"That they are," agreed Mannows. "Too young to know better! It takes years to drill a little sense into them! Ever go back on class day?"

"I went two years ago," said Bill. "I tell you it made me feel good to see what a splendid class of fellows Harvard turns out each year!"

"Uh-huh," said Mannows. "Of course, Harvard is bigger, but when you come right down to it I guess the men who go to Tech are about the cream of the lot. Fine chaps, good families and all that."

"Oh, yes," said Bill. "But nothing like Harvard. I tell you—"

"Oh, come now, Bill," Mannows broke in complacently. "Of course, it's all right to stick up for your alma mater and all that, but you're old enough now to look at things with a sane and unprejudiced eye, and you must acknowledge that the mere fact that Tech is a scientific school would bring to it a brainier, more earnest set of students than would attend an ordinary university! Fellows with some real purpose in life, you know, and with aims—no society butterflies with more cash than brains ever chose Tech!"

"Well, just because Harvard isn't crammed with a lot of fellows with bulging foreheads doesn't hurt it. I'd have you know!" said Bill, warmly.

"They are all around men who take an interest in all sides of life. I hate a narrow man! And in athletics—"

"Now, now!" interrupted Mannows, warningly. "You are never going to dig up that Gensler game, are you? Harvard never could take a licking gracefully—"

Bill stopped short and shook his finger under Mannows' nose. He tried to speak three times before he could get out the words. "Licking!" he repeated in strained tones. "No one but a prejudiced, unfair, spongy-headed idiot of a Tech man ever would have agreed to that umpire's decision. If Harvard wasn't euchred out of a fair game by the most underhanded, unjust, outrageous decision that ever—"

"Everybody saw Gensler when he cheated!" Mannows shouted. "Everybody! Nobody with a grain of decency in him would have dared to claim that game! Harvard showed the yellow in her all right by having the sneaking nerve to object! She should have hid her head in shame! The Harvard men should have been egged off the grounds! They should have been ridden on a rail! All of the—"

"You with your bribed umpire!" Bill yelled. "I'd talk if I were you, yes, I would! Of all the disgraceful acts of Tech that was the limit! From top to bottom Tech is a motherless, disreputable—"

"I'll punch your face!" Mannows bellowed, shaking his fist. "If you don't take back your slanders on the best—"
